Thoughts on Science and Spirituality

A Talk by Dr Daniel Scott

A Member of the Christian Science
Board of Lectureship

In this 200th anniversary of Charles Darwin this talk looks at the relationship between science and religion and the impact of the ideas of Darwin, Mary Baker Eddy and Thomas Kuhn, exploring an inclusive and universal concept of God, credible in a scientific age.

Daniel earned a PhD in mathematical physics, before becoming a Christian Science practitioner and lecturer. He has given presentations at several scientific conferences, and earlier this year gave a lecture at Winchester's Discovery Centre, as one of a series to commemorate Charles Darwin's 200th birthday.
